

A new antidepressant is being released in Australia on 1st June, (and subsidised on the PBS, a big help) operating simultaneously on the serotonin and noradrenaline pathways in the brain. The medication has been in the USA for 4 years, and in Europe for 3 years. We hope to obtain an electronic copy of the information brochure, and also write a practical guide giving Clinical Assoc Prof Horgan's opinions asap. It is also considered good for pain! More details soon, we hope.
